Title and abstract of the doctoral thesis (within 150 words)
Empirical Assessment of Public Enforcement of Competition Law: Criteria and Three Case Studies (EU, France and UK)
The main concern of this thesis is to examine how public enforcement of competition law should be assessed. This thesis offers the theoretical, analytical and empirical perspective for why and how public enforcement should be assessed, and the importance of the assessment process itself in revealing enforcement problems. Thus, this thesis investigates the issue of assessing public enforcement of competition law by suggesting criteria for the assessment process and to apply the suggested criteria to data collected by the author from the UK, EU and France
