Title and abstract of the doctoral thesis
Title: The statutory methods of schemes of compromise and arrangement, reconstruction and amalgamation, variation of class rights, reduction of share capital &amp; take-over. The thesis deals with statutory methods of corporates restructuring commercial companies under the British legislations in terms of reviewing available statutory methods of schemes of compromise and arrangement, reconstruction and amalgamation, variation of class rights, reduction of share capital &amp; take-over . The thesis also reviewed the overlapping between the statutory provisions related to the corporate restructuring operation mentioned above, where the British legislator devoted to each of the restructuring operation of companies a specific statutory provision to implement the operation. Meanwhile there is a general statutory provision provides that with approval of a 75% of the company's shareholders, they can do all corporate restructuring operations without need to trigger the specific statutory provisions designed for the operation. Consequently, the thesis reached to the most important finding that there is a statutory overlapping leads to the loss of both shareholders and creditor’s rights according to the implemented statutory provision. Finally, the thesis reached to findings and recommendations
